

Strong leadership goes beyond the merely cosmetic

Debbie Nicol

November 16, 2014 Updated: November 16, 2014 06:35 PM

Related

Is resistance hovering close to you like a drone?

Unified effort the way for organisations to move forward

Dangers of hastily thought out change

Debbie Nicol: Embrace change and manage it wisely

Topics: Management

Here's a leadership "wow" if ever there's been one: printable make-up. Yes, printable make-up, from a printer that produces a lady's preferred colour of eyeshadow in a matter of minutes. Did that catch your attention?

What's that got to do with leadership? Some might say that the concept of printable make-up is about innovation, not leadership. I beg to differ as it's not the outcome but the very reason that Grace Choi, the founder of a one-woman New York-based start-up, Mink, embarked on her business journey that makes this a leadership case study. In her mind, it was time to stop a US$65 billion industry from disadvantaging women. Why shouldn't women be able to match an outfit with a relatively low-cost make-up option? In Ms Choi's mind, it was time to shift power from "big boys" to the playing field, allowing ladies to "print high-quality products at drug store prices".

Ms Choi had something she cared for and felt deeply about. This was passionately charged and became her personal mission and way to contribute. Are you a Ms Choi yourself, one who has connection and meaning in life? How can you reach that stage in life?

1. Keep your feelers open

Leaders recognise frustration. Is a system too slow and getting tempers frayed? It's time for convenience and freedom of choice. Is a problem unsolved? It's time to find a better way. Is there a demographic that is treated unfairly? Create a solution that brings equity.

We've all heard of people who believe it's not right to kill stray animals then set up animal shelters. There are even illustrators who paint stories for the illiterate. Behind all of these situations lie reasons for living, purposes to achieve. Keep your feelers out for the times when you become frustrated or emotional, and within that emotion there's an opportunity for change.

2. Identify the "what" and let the "how" emerge

Trust me, it's OK not to have all the answers. There is help out there in ways and means we cannot explain. When clarity of the "what" exists, things start happening around you – exactly the right person to help can be introduced to you when you least expect it, or that essential information you needed suddenly pops up on your screen. A small example I experienced was when I needed an introduction and it fell into my lap after I won a competition. For some time, I had been in awe of a media personality who seemed relatively difficult to reach and to spend time with; relationship-based business requires an understanding of the person first before the business need. By winning the competition, I received deeper insights into who this personality is. Grace Choi would never have known how to patent a product but I can bet that came her way once she was building the prototype machine.

3. Act and “be” the change

Personify the change your idea will create, even before the device is built, the product is created or the experience exists. It was the frustration or emotion that dragged you into this, so the freedom from that frustration or emotion will manifest itself in all you do.

Leadership is everyone's job. Can these steps apply on all scales such as small changes in the workplace? Absolutely, yes. And what about community projects? Aren't we all frustrated in some way in the supermarket or on the roads? Projects that engage the community can often succeed, but let's keep things in perspective and realise that Rome wasn't built in a day.

We may not all be frustrated by the price of make-up yet we can all leave our mark on this world in some small way. Leadership is a responsibility that we can choose to take on board – why not observe yourself for a week or two? After all, many others are.

Debbie Nicol, the managing director of Dubai-based business en motion, is a consultant working with strategic change, leadership and organisational development. Email her at debbie.nicol@businessenmotion.com for thoughts about your corporate change initiative

Follow The National's Business section on Twitter

Add your comment | View all comments

Related

Is resistance hovering close to you like a drone?

Unified effort the way for organisations to move forward

Dangers of hastily thought out change

Debbie Nicol: Embrace change and manage it wisely

More The Life

MOST VIEWED

BUSINESS | ALL

1. Why you need a Good Conduct Certificate from Dubai Police

2. Luxury living in Abu Dhabi's tallest

Asus Zenfone 5 review: Lacks the promised peace, beauty and calm

Questionable health issues in Lebanon but food standards sacrosanct

Search consultancy boss versed in executive affairs

Strong leadership goes beyond the merely cosmetic

tower, Burj Mohammed Bin Rashid - in pictures

3. Palm Jumeirah in Dubai to get first Sharia-compliant hotel

4. Dubai resident gets mystery traffic fine while away on holiday

5. Standard Chartered files $129m suit against Sharjah-based IGPL over loan defaults

6. Nakheel agreement allows retailers to move into Golden Mile on Dubai's Palm Jumeirah

7. 'Hallibaker' merger bid shows consolidation as early symptom of oil price slide

8. Three reasons why Etihad's tie-up with Alitalia can fly

9. Arabtec Q3 profits fall following company-wide restructuring after Hasan Ismaik departure

10. Asus Zenfone 5 review: Lacks the promised peace, beauty and calm

More Most Viewed

EDITOR'S PICKS

The world's top 10 best airports 2014 - in pictures

UAE credit reports now available for Dh110

Where Dubai rents have risen and fallen, Q3 2014 - in pictures

Where Abu Dhabi rents have risen and fallen, Q3 2014

FOLLOW US

Like us

Like 114k

Tweets

Follow

The National @TheNationalUAE

3h

Housemaid jailed for life for strangling 11-month old baby to death in Dubai news.ae/1EQvc6s

Show Summary

National Business
@Ind_Insights

4h

Read our review of the new @ASUS Zenfone 5: news.ae/1vkrXEC @Triska

Retweeted by The National

Show Summary

LifeNationalUAE
@LifeNationalUAE

4h

Amid changing tides, Dutch DJ and #AbuDhabi Grand Prix F1 post-race headliner @ArminvanBuuren still on top: news.ae/11cSqH3 #ASOT

Retweeted by The National

Show Summary

National Business
@Ind_Insights

5h

Have you been asked to get a behaviour check from #Dubai Police? Here's what to do.

news.ae/1xww3Kt @FinancialUAE @TheNationalPF #UAE

Retweeted by The National

Show Summary

Tweet to @TheNationalUAE